

Brief

Getting Into the Mind of Your Customer

MARKETING CHALLENGE: POSITIONING

Positioning starts with a product: merchandise, service, company, or institution. Positioning is not done to the product—it is what is done to the mind of your target customer. It's all about creating “mind space.” It should be your first action when trying to be heard in a sea of overcommunication.

Your ultimate outcome of a positioning assignment should be a positioning statement. The most common elements of a positioning statement include: Target, Category, Your Point of Difference, Payoff (the ultimate benefit), and Reasons to Believe.

The two most important components are the Insight and the Payoff. Both are based on a deep and intuitive understanding of the consumer, customer, or end-user. They define what motivates people to act. The more emotionally laden, the better — even in B2B.

Associating your product with an emotion is huge. It is more likely to be remembered and stand for something unique.

The primary role of research is to identify the Insight, the Payoff, and the underlying emotion. This is done through careful and deliberate discussion with the target customer. Discussions of this nature require a high degree of trust between the interviewer and interviewee and necessitate usage of techniques to get people to think abstractly. From there, your research team needs to report back what people mean, not what they say.

Mind space is created when the target customer hears your message and it instantly resonates. That is, your target customer knows that you are talking directly to him or her, and that you get them. The insight leads to empathy leads to mind space.

BENEFITS OF POSITIONING

- Consistency in messaging is important & makes your marketing spend more effective
- Organizational alignment
- Points of differentiation lead to higher gross margins
- Brand equity is an asset with a financial value
- Builds a firewall against changes in the market and competitive actions

Getting Into the Mind of Your Customer

MARKETING CHALLENGE: POSITIONING

Get Smart

Brief

Get Smarter

- We highly recommend the book Positioning: The Battle for Your Mind. It's a marketing classic, an easy read, and worth the time.
- Does your organization need a responsive helping hand when conducting do-it-yourself research? Our consultants are available to assist with problem definition, project scoping, reviewing discussion guides, reviewing questionnaires, interview coaching, and more. This is the best way to offer your team the training and support they need to elevate customer understanding across the organization. Blocks of time can be booked according to your needs. Contact us for more details.
- Check out our event schedule for upcoming workshops.

Kickstart

You can quickly activate the positioning process with a workshop focused on your own brand and products. It is an excellent way to enhance skills, roll up internal ideas, and identify gaps in your knowledge. Contact us for more details.